NAWBO Honors Women Business Owners

The Inland Empire Chapter of the National Association of Women Business Owners (NAWBO) held their annual Celebration and Scholarship Gala April 18th at Eagle Glen in Corona. This year the organization celebrated “Decades of Diamonds,” ten years of helping women entrepreneurs and small business owners. Businesswoman of the Year was awarded to Time for Change founder Kim Carter. She has dedicated her life’s work to helping women and children make the transition from homelessness and recidivism to self-sufficiency. Also present for the special ten-year celebration was Anita Sparks, former multi-term president of the NAWBO-IE. She is currently the Director of operations for Get2Ten Consulting.
