Time for Change Foundation’s Kim Carter to Receive Lifetime Achievement Award

Kim Carter, who is recognized for her work. Kim Carter started Time for Change Foundation in her garage as a women’s organization in 2002 with one shelter with 6 beds. Today, Time for Change Foundation has a staff of 11, a total housing capacity of 114 annually along with evidence-based programs and supportive services that provide communities with the tools to recover from homelessness, drug addiction, mental and physical abuse, family separation and the effects of incarceration.

In addition to being the national model for housing and supportive services, Time for Change Foundation is also a low-income housing developer, has a strong advocacy arm and provides evidence-based training to governmental and non-governmental agencies and organizations through its Center for Advocacy and Leadership Training (CALT).
