Power concedes nothing without a demand. It never did and it never will. Find out just what people will submit to and you have found out the exact amount of injustice and wrong which will be imposed upon them and these will continue till they have resisted either with words or blows or words or with both. The limits of tyrants are prescribed by the endurance of those whom they suppress.

Victor McElhaney

LOS ANGELES — An Oakland City Council member March 12 hailed the life of her slain son — a USC student who was gunned down near campus in an apparent robbery attempt — saying he was a musical prodigy who will be remembered as more than just a homicide statistic.

Speaking to reporters at USC, Lynette Gibson McElhaney said her 21-year-old son Victor, who was fatally shot just after midnight March 10 near Maple Avenue and Adams Boulevard, is "not a homicide number or statistic."

"I want you all to know that Victor came into the world a drummer. He was drumming from the minute he could sit up," she said. "Victor was listening for a sound. He drummed before he could walk. He drummed before he could talk."

"And we felt bonded and loved at this place. So I want to say thank you SC. ... He walked here, he was tall here and you all loved him."

Interim USC President Wanda Austin sent out a statement informing the USC community of McElhaney's death. In it she expressed her condolences to his family and friends.

"He believed in the power of music to touch lives to heal and to bring hope," Austin said.

McElhaney's killing is the latest of several high-profile killings of students in apparent robberies or attempted robberies near USC's campus in the past seven years.
