Dr. Nena Messina, Ph.D., a Criminologist at the UCLA Integrated Substance Abuse Programs reported her 3-year findings as Lead Evaluator for the Time for Change Foundation's Positive Futures project funded by the Substance Abuse Mental Health Services Administration (SAMSHA). The results of her evaluation yielded a zero percent recidivism rate for the 131 clients served.

"SAMHSA often looks for successful programs to hold as the "gold standard" - [The Time for Change Foundation] Positive Futures [program] is an example that other programs can emulate," said Dr. Messina.

"After years of being referred to as "Evidence Based Kim" because we are focused on doing what is best (evidence based) instead of what feels good, it feels good to be nationally recognized for our outcomes," said Kim Carter, TFCF Executive Director. Nicole Wolfe, TFCF Director of their Center for Advocacy and Leadership Training (CALT) was "excited for the community to see the results of our evidence based training programs."

Family and friends of honorees, elected officials and supporters of Time for Change Foundation were in attendance, enjoying social hour, entertainment by Jazz saxophonist Vaughn Fahie, a viewing of the agency's new video, participating in the silent auction and much more.

Time for Change Foundation provides essential resources through our programs and services to women and children who desire to change the course of their lives by making the transition from homelessness and recidivism to self-sufficiency.
